I mean the one that requires so many things to be done for a correct result. Despite that, there are plenty of sites out there that can help you with the process, but what about those who don't want to be bothered by all the steps to do it? A tool to resolve your issue is Subs Grabber. To download subtitles from movies, this software allows you to search online databases and to download the subtitle of your choice. In case you don't know, a movie consists of parts with episodes distributed in a certain order. In some DVDs or Blu-rays, you can find the movies presented in this fashion and you can download the subtitles for each one of them individually. But what if you need to download the subtitles of a film that doesn't have many episodes? There is no way to do it directly. Knowing this, you only have to run the program, point the program to the movie you want to get the subtitles from, and choose the database that you are going to take the subs from. Another really nice feature of this program is that it integrates with Windows Explorer and you can search inside all the pictures and videos in the folders stored on your computer. Lastly, when you want to save the subtitles for the DVD or Blu-ray, you just have to indicate the language and type, and the software will do its job in no time.
